Caesoma Babaráin (1936-1991) is one of the best known recent composers of Spanish Litency Música. Many of his hymns and music are inspired by the feelings and actions of ordinary people he met during his ministry. He is represented in singing the fan by "fisherman of Hombres" (~ â € ‡ ¬ "Men's Ferries), known for being a favorite hymn of Pope John II. As we sing, we stayed next to those who have little - and admit that they are also, whatever our social position, we had little to offer Jesus from the gallery he gave his life for us. à ¢ â € ¬Å "Lord, see my goods and possessions; On my boat you do not find power without wealth. Will you accept, then, my networks and work? (V.2) (the same theme is exploited by Christina Georgina Rossetti in his Carol, in the dark middist: Ã ¢ â € "What can I give to him, poor as I am, â €) The words of St. Augustine in his confessions: "You made us for yourself, sir, and our heart is uneasy until you rest in you. "Cesera gabarão was born in 1936 in Hernani, in the northern area of Spain. He trained as a In San Sebastiá, and served as a chapel and as a useful team to his initial death in 1991, aged 55 years. Following the Second Vatican Concern, Gabarão, took advantage of the new freedom now allowed in hymn styles. With about 500 hymns and music for his name, gabarão frequently evoked human need and a writer suggests that their hymns reflect "the deepest emotions of human spirit". In an interview * given in Dallas, Texas, in the year before dying, gabarão said that it was his desire to evangelize through the music that motivated his work and stimulated him in the song composition in the first place . "I went to the seminar when I was too young" when I was eleven. The seminarium was very musical and there I learned very well. Later, when I was a priest, I went to know the children and they began to bring their guitars. I saw that with the old songs and the Gregorian corners I would not be able to teach them a lot. So, I began to compose out of the need for a pastor, with the intention of sharing things and ideas that I was trying to convey to children. His truth considerable, he said: "Many people ask me what hymns I prefer - what I like the most. But for a father is difficult to say which child he prefers more.
