ISO/IEC 12207:2008 establishes a common framework for software lifecycle processes, with a well defined terminology, which can be referred to by the software industry. It contains processes, activities and tasks that must be applied during the acquisition of a product or software service and during the supply, development, operation, maintenance and disposal of software products. The software includes the firmware software part. ISO/IEC 12207:2008 applies to the acquisition of software and service systems and products, to the provision, development, operation, maintenance and disposal of software products and to the software part of a system, both internally and externally executed to an organization. These aspects of the system definition necessary to provide context for software products and services are included. ISO/IEC 12207:2008 also provides a process that can be used to define, control and improve the software lifecycle processes. Processes, activities and activities of ISO/IEC 12207:2008 - both alone and in conjunction with ISO/IEC 15288 - can also be applied during the acquisition of a system containing software.
