Originally, the question of whether gambling is a game of chance rather than a game of chance played an important role in the strict rules applied in Italy. Prior to 2006, only a small number of state-funded betting operators were allowed to race in Italy due to strict government regulations, including the Italian National Olympic Committee (CONI) and the Italian National Olympic Committee. National Horse Breeders Enhancement Society (UNIRE). To say that gambling laws were the most restrictive in Europe before 2006 would not be an exaggeration. The rulings then in force banned the operation of some 600 betting sites, a situation that was perceived as a monopoly of the industry and in violation of EU regulations. Subsequently, in 2006, the European Commission conducted a survey of the gambling industry in Italy, which marked a turning point for the whole gaming landscape in Italy with the introduction of legislation allowing other games of skill, while the survey opened up the market to bookmakers at the outside Italy (but still in the EU) to make themselves available to Italian bettors, provided they meet the necessary requirements and can obtain an Italian licence. AAMS (Autonomous Administration of State Monopolies). As a result, some of the largest European bookmakers in the world - Betfair, William Hill, Ladbrokes - can operate within the country and attract an Italian audience, a scenario that has allowed Italy to become a major player in the country. To become one of the most professors in the world. online gambling markets. How the regulations affect you Payers in Italy have always been well protected and even more so according to the most recent laws. There is no chance that Italian players will be exposed to anything other than reputable companies, given the conditions that an online bookmaker must comply with in order to obtain a license from AAMS, which includes being based in the EU, complying with sales data, using working software and paying a mandatory fee of €350,000 to support AAMS in the regulation of the market. In addition, players are exempt from paying winnings tax: only operators are required to pay according to the law. It seems that the powers have been watching countries like France, subjecting betting companies to a spike, making it impossible to make a profit, a scenario that leaves the possibility of an uncertain market to be developed open. However we are aware that some people may want a little more information about those who manage exactly every site, which takes us to our next table. Here you can see the key information about the companies behind the brands à € "that manages them, that their license number is and what they do to protect Your money. Note: The following information is correct as of 25.6.20 and has been compiled independently from information collected by the United Kingdom GC and the related terms and conditions of the betting sites. What does the shelter store do? There are three levels of protection ranging from unprotected at all to super safe. While there is no minimum UK licensed sites must meet, they must tell you whether your money is protected or not. This only matters if something were to go so drastically wrong with the company that led them to race, but it's something to keep in mind anyway. Deposit Protection Notice at a Betting Site The levels found in the table are: No Protection à The client's funds are kept in the main bank account and are not segregated. This is not ideal as it means in the unlikely event of a bookie going under your funds could be lost. Medium protection à Medium protection is normally sufficient and requires the bookmaker to make arrangements to guarantee the return of the client's funds should they go to the bust. This could involve keeping separate accounts for the client's funds and/or purchase insurance that would pay if something went wrong. High protection à The highest form of protection makes clients' funds legally separated from books and audited by an external auditor. Who are the biggest betting companies in the UK? If you look at the table above you will notice that some of the license numbers and operator names are the same. This is because some companies operate more brands either as part of their brand strategy or because they have purchased one of their competitors (something that is becoming increasingly common in the UK). The biggest names to look at are: Flutter Entertainment: Paddy Power + Betfair Flutter have changed their names a few times over the years, but the main brands at its center are Betfair and Paddy Power. In fact, until the most recent name change in 2019 they were known as Paddy Power Betfair. The two main brands had previously operated independently and merged in 2015, laying the foundation for what has become a huge player in the world of online gambling. In 2020 they also joined with the Stars group à another big company that has some of the biggest names in the poker world under their belt, including their name Poker Stars and sister site Full Tilt. CVC Holdings: Coral, Ladbrokes + Many other GVCs are another betting company that were formed as a result of multiple mergers and acquisitions and includes big sports brands Coral and Ladbrokes along with some of the biggest and oldest names in the game like Gala Bingo and Party Casino. The foundations of the company we see today come from the initial purchase of Coral Eurobet from Gala which took place in 2005 forming the new Gala Coral Group. Ten years later in 2016 the Gala Coral Group merged with Ladbrokes to form the Ladbrokes Coral Group, a transaction that required the disposal of ~400 of their rival high-brand street betting shops. Interestingly, Ladbrokes and Coral had been in business before and in 1998 Ladbrokes tried to buy Coral together with the 900 or so betting shops, but the Monopolies and Mergers Commission decided that the newly formed group was anti-competitive and so Coral was sold sold Through a Management Buyout. He didn't spend a long time after Ladbrokes Coral was formed that he was taken by the venture capital company that possessed party casino, GVC Holdings, in a huge à, 4 billion sterling business. The purchase was agreed in 2017, just a year after the previous fusion, and completed in 2018. Kindred: Unibet, 32Red + other Kindred are a relatively small group compared to others, but contain some strong brands including Unibet and 32Red. Their origins come from Unibet which was the first brand of the group (and still remains the largest today) after which they carried out a series of small acquisitions that eventually led to the change named by Unibet Group to Kindred in 2016. Era In 2017 they bought 32Red, a brand that is most commonly associated with their casino but which also runs sports betting next to poker and bingo salt. A year earlier, in 2016, they also took another good known English name: Stan James. Even if it was short-term as the Stan James brand has finally been closed and clients migrated to Unibet. Kindred also managed the Kambi platform, which offered sports betting services and risk management to various brands, although in 2014 the company was separate and now operates completely independent of the original Kindred group. Independent betting sites While there has been a shift to large groups funded with risk capital in recent years, there are still a number of betting sites that operate independently. Both as a stand-alone brand and as a small group at the inside of a private company. So if you prefer to place your bets with a smaller operation, then these are the ones you want to search: bet365 Betfred Betvictor BoyleSports The observer between you could notice that these names manage all the betting shops or made it before Or then. But more on this in the next section. What about High Street Bookmakers? If you are looking for a more traditional helibrator then you may have already considered some of the names you know from British High Street. We will talk more about our bookmakers page, but almost all high street chains operate online, which leads to further advantages, given that you are able to ride the world of virtual and physical bets. Many of the major groups of betting shops have realized that their customers could want to bet both online and in the store and have created connections between the two, allowing bettors to bet in the store and claim winning bets on their online account rather Returning to the store. Or, on the contrary, to bet online and then go to cash the winnings in person (and in cash). When it comes to small independent betting shops it can be more successful Forget it. Some have online sites, but tend to be fairly common white labels, which means you will find nothing particularly interesting when it comes to odds or offers. High Street v Online only apart from the To bet and manage your account in the store, you might wonder if the brick and mortar brands offer better service or if their only online counterparts are more hanging on business and then putting out better odds or offers. In the early stages of the Internet the latter seemed to be the case and many highway names bordered through the recognition of the brand and the acquisitions of easy customers rather than focusing on their product, however this is definitely the case now. Online bets in the UK has grown in a multi-billion pounds business and as such enormous amounts were invested to provide better features and offers. This bar lifting has applied both to online and more traditional brands and while there are clear differences between good sites (such as those recommended above) and the poorest sites, there seems to be no correlation between a physical presence of brands and how much they are Goods. How do you compare the odds? For the trademarks that operate both in person and online it would be forgiven for assuming that the odds of a specific brand are the same, regardless of whether you bet in the store or on the web. However this is not the case. In fact, online quotas almost always beat the high road even within the same brand à € "so online bets MrBookie is generally to give you better quotas than in one of the MrBookie stores. The terms are often different and online sites often offer improved places on races compared to a traditional betting shop, especially when it comes to higher profile events. For example, with a bookmaker their site was offering 6 seats on the Grand National while their store offered only 4. Sounds strange, but the stores have increased the most high management and personnel costs, which means I am not able To be quite competitive. They are also aware that the options are more limited as you are less likely to leave a store to find another if you don't like their probabilities, while when you bet online a new bookie is just a click away. What to do if you have a problem with a recommended bookmaker?
