It's never too early to teach your kids important money-saving skills. Here are some of the best accounts to help them understand the basics of finance. The number of U.S. households without a bank account last year fell to the lowest level since 2009, in part because people opened accounts for financial help during the pandemic, says a new report. Unbanked and unbanked households, according to the latest study from the Federal Insurance Corporation. About 45% of households that received stimulus payments, unemployment benefits or other government assistance since the pandemic began in March 2020 said the funds helped them open an account, according to the annual report, which has been issued since 2009. "Safe and accessible banking accounts help attract more Americans to the banking system and will continue to play an important role in promoting economic inclusion for all Americans," said FDIC Acting Chairman Martin J. Grunberg, in the statement. A Lack of banking serviceshas delayed some households from receiving federal payments intended to help the state weather the economic fallout from the COVID-19 health crisis. Fighting predatory lending: The Mississippi Society for Social Justice fights against "predatory lending" in low-income communities. But that may change. The FDIC launched an educational campaign to encourage more Americans to open an account that would allow them to directly deposit these funds. And banks like Capital One and Ally Financial have eliminated overdraft and other fees that have been a major barrier to accessing banking for some Americans. What does it mean to be without a bank account? bank account or credit union. Since 2009, this proportion of households has decreased by almost half. From 2011, when 8% of U.S. households were unbanked, the highest since the study began, and a record low in 2021, about half of the decline came from what the FDIC sees as changes in the financial situation of American households. . Who is disadvantaged? Those who have a checking or savings account but also use financial alternatives such as check cashing services are considered low income. Last year, 14% of American households, or 18.7 million people, were unbanked. Why are people unbanked or underbanked? Many of those who don't have a bank account say they can't afford it because of a lack of funds and overdraft fees that come with insufficient account balances. Some 29% cited a lack of fees or minimum balance requirements as the main reason they don't have a checking or savings account, up from 38% who cited these barriers in 2019. Are some groups likely to not have a bank account? the number of non-performing banks was higher in working-age and disabled households with lower incomes, single mother, ex black or hispanic. For example, among white households, 2% did not have a bank account last year, compared with 11% and 9% of their black and Hispanic counterparts. Meanwhile, almost 15% of households with people with disabilities of working age did not have bank accounts, compared to almost 4% of other households. And nearly 16% of single mother households did not have a bank account, compared to about 2% of married couples who did not have a bank account. "These gaps indicate that there is still much room to increase public participation in the banking system," Keith Ernst, the FDIC's associate director of consumer research and analytics, said at the report's news conference. Will the number of non-banks increase if the US sinks into recession? Maybe. "During the last recession, non-bank interest rates really went up," Karien Chu, head of banking research at the Center for Financial Research, said in a telephone interview. Workers are nearly five times more likely to be unbanked than heads of households 2023 Recession Predictions: Is a Recession Coming in 2023? Here's what the experts are saying: "Once incomes go down ... it's usually associated with higher non-bank rates," Chu said.
