In Con Indy 2007/NatoErnest Gary Gyxx & Chaimnal, a miniature wargame based on the medieval war. Ha! the company Tactical Studies Rules (TSR, Inc.) in 1973. The following year, Arneson created D&D, which expanded on Gyxx Chaimnal and included elements of fantasy stories he loved as a child. In the same year he founded The Dragon, a magazine based on the new game. In the 1977 Gyxx began working on a more complete version of the game, called Advanced Dungeons & Dragons. Gyxx designed numerous manuals for the game system, as well as several pre-packaged adventures called "modules" that gave a person who ran a D&D game (the Dungeon Master) an approximate script and ideas on how to run a particular game scenario. In the 1980s he worked to get the D&D product line into the famous D&D cartoon series. After leaving TSR in the 1986 due to problems with the new majority owner, Gyxx continued to create independent role playing titles, starting with the multi-game Dangerous Journeys in the 1992. He designed another game system called Legendary Adventure, published in the 1990's. In 2005 Gyxx participated in the Castles & Crusades role play, conceived as a hybrid between the third edition of D&D and the original version of the game designed by Gyxx. Gyxx married twice and had six children. In 2004 Gyxx had two strokes and managed to avoid a heart attack; He was diagnosed with an abdominal aneurysm and died in March 2008. Early life and inspiration Gyxx was born in Chicago, son of Almira Emelie Posey a (Burdick) [4] and Ernst Gyxx, a Swiss immigrant and former violinist of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. [5][6] Gary Cooper. The family lived on Kenmore Avenue, close enough to Wrigley Field[8] to hear the roar of the crowd watching the Chicago Cubs. At the age of seven, he became a member of a small group of friends who called themselves the Kenmore Pirates. "In the 1946's, after the Kenmore Pirates were involved in a fight with another Of boys, [9] His father decided to move the family to the house of the Posey family in Lake Geneva, Wisconsin. [10] where the Posey family had settled in the early 19th century, and where the Gary grandparents still lived. [6] [11] [12] In this new environment, Gyxx soon made friends with many of his peers, including Don Kaye and Mary Jo Powell. During his childhood and teenage years, he developed a love for games and an appreciation for fantasy and science fiction literature. When he was five, he played card games like Pinochle and then board games like chess. [13] [14] At the age of ten, he and his friends played the sort of credit games that eventually came to be called "live action role games" with one of them acting as arbitrator. 15 His father introduced him to science fiction and fantasy through the novels of pulp. [6] [14] His interest in the games, combined with an appreciation of history, eventually brought Gyxx to start playing miniature war games in 1953 with his best friend Don Kaye. [14] As adolescents Gyxx and Kaye have designed their rules in miniatures for toy soldiers with a large collection of figures of 54 mm and 70 mm, where they used "ladyngrays" (small firecrackers) to simulate explosions. [16] When he created the boys, Gyxx had a voracious appetite for writers of fictional pasta such as Robert Howard, Jack Vance, Fritz Leiber, HP Lovecraft, and Edgar Rice Burroughs. [7]. â€ S406 S Gyxx was a mediocre student, and in 1956, a few months after his father died, he left high school in his junior year. [7]. â€ â€ 4343â€ S He joined the Marines, but after being diagnosed with walking pneumonia, he received a medical discharge and went home with his mother. [7]. â€ â€ 449 S From there, he switched to a job as a shipping employee with Kemper Insurance Co. in Chicago. Shortly after his friend introduced him to Avalon Hill's New Wargame Gettysburg, Gyxx was soon obsessed with the game, often playing marathon sessions one or more a week. [17] It was also from Avalon Avalonho ordered the first empty hexadecimal mapping sheets available, which he then used to design his own games. [18] Around the same time he discovered Gettysburg, his mother introduced him to Mary Jo Powell, who had left Lake Geneva as a child and had just returned. Gyxx fell in love with the woman and, after a short courtship, persuaded her to marry him, even though she was only 19. This caused some friction with his best friend Don Kaye, who had also courted Mary Jo. Kaye refused to participate in Gyxx's marriage.[7]. "47" Kaye and Gyxx reconciled after the marriage. The couple moved to Chicago, where Gyxx continued to work as an employee at Kemper Insurance. He found a job for Mary Jo, but the company fired her when she became pregnant with their first child.[7]. "53" She also took anthropology courses at the University of Chicago.[5][6] Despite her commitment to her work, raising a family, school and her political volunteering, Gyxx continued to make wargames. In 1962, Gyxx got a job as an insurer with Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. His family continued to grow and, after the birth of his third son, he decided to move back to Lake Geneva[5]. Apart from a few months he spent in Clinton, Wisconsin,[19] after the divorce, and the time he spent in Hollywood while he was head of TSR's entertainment division, Lake Geneva would be his home for the rest of his life. In 1966, Gyxx was active in the world of wargame hobbies and wrote many articles on the subject.[20]. "20" Gyxx came aware of H. G. Wells's book Little Wars for military miniature games and Fletcher Pratt's book "Naval Wargame." Gyxx subsequently looked for innovative ways to generate random numbers, and used Solo dadi comuni a sei facce, ma dadi di tutte e cinque le forme solite platoniche.[21] che scoprì " in un catalogo di forniture scolastiche.[12] Gyxx citò le sue influenze come Robert E. In 1967, Gyxx rented the gardening hall at Lake Geneva for fifty dollars (in 2020)[23] to hold the first game convention of Lake Geneva, also known as the Gen Con gathering, which was a short-term. [12] Gyxx is now one of the largest annual hobby-gaming conventions in North America. [24] Gyxx met Dave Arneson at the future of D&D in Chicago in August 1969. [12] [25] Gyxx was the first of the medieval period, especially the Dark Ages. We started playing for the period because e i found the right thumbnaes. "Gary Gyxx[26] Along with Don Kaye, Mike Reese and Leon Tucker, Gyxx created a military miniature company called Lake Geneva Tactical Studies Association (LGTSa) in the 1970.[20]: 26 with its first headquarters in Gyxx's basement. [14] Shortly after, in the 1970's, Robert Kuntz and Gyxx founded the Castle & Crusade Society of the IFW. [20]: 29 Late in October 1970, Gyxx lost his job at the insurance company where he had been almost nine years. Unemployed and now with a family of five daughters Ernest ("Ernie"), Lucian ("Luke"), Heidi, Cindy and Elise[15][15]He tried to use his enthusiasm for games to live designing board games for commercial sale. This proved fairly unsustainable when it has only gross 8882 in the 1971 (equivalent to 85636 in the 2020). [7]: 84 He began his shoes ironed in his basement, which provided him with a stable income and gave him more time to pursue his interest in the development of the game. [20]: 33 In the 1971, he began to do some editing work for Guidon Games, a wargames publisher.[15] for which he produced from table Alexander the Great and Dunkirk: The battle of Earlier that year, Gyxx released Chaimnal, a miniature wargame simulating medieval tactical combat, which he had originally written with hobby shop owner Jeff Perren. The rules of Chaimnal's medieval miniatures were originally published in the Castle & Crusade Society fanzine The Domesday Book. Guidon Games hired Gyxx to produce a series of games, "Wargaming at the Dawn of the Dragon." [27] [28] [29] In 1977, when he was in the process of refining the concept of the original D&D, Gyxx refused its offer. [30] In 1979, the Gyxx Greylhawk TSR hobbyist released a completely new and complex version of D&D called Advanced Dungeons & Dragons. The founder Chaimnal, publishing towards the Guidon Games. Chaimnal was relatively successful, selling 100 copies a month. [7]: 86 Gyxx co-collaborated on Tactical Studies with Mike Reese & Leon Tucker, his contribution was the switch to a 20-sided spinning wheel or a coffee can with 20 numbered poker chips (or eventually 20-dices) to decide combat resolution, instead of standard 6-sided dice. [7]: 87 He also collaborated with Dave Arneson on the Napoleonic naval wargame. In the fall of 1972, towards the end of November, Dave Arneson and his friend David Megarry, inventor of the Dungeon! world game, traveled to Lake Geneva to show their respective games to Gyxx, in his role as representative of Guidon Games. Gyxx saw the potential in both games, and was particularly excited about Arneson's role-playing.[12][31] Gyxx and Arneson immediately began collaborating on the creation of "The Fantasy Game", the role-playing game that will evolve into Dungeons & Dragons. [3][12][32] Two weeks after Arneson's Blackmoor demonstration, Gyxx had produced a 50-page set of rules, andready to try it on his two older children, Ernie and Elise, in an environment called "Greyhawk". This group quickly expanded to include Don Kaye, Rob Kuntz and finally a large circle of players. Gyxx sent the 50 rules pages to his wargaming contacts and asked them to playtest the new game. Gyxx and Arneson continued to exchange notes on their campaigns. The final draft, however, contained changes that were not controlled by Arneson, and Gyxx's vision differed on some rule details Arneson had preferred. [7]: 100 Based on the feedback received, Gyxx created a review of 150 page rules by mid-1973. Several aspects of the system that rules magic in the game were inspired by the stories of The Dying Earth of the fantasy author Jack Vance (especially the fact that magic users in the game forget the spells they learned immediately after they threw them, and they have to re-study them to redesign), and the system as a whole designed on the work of authors like Robert E. Howard, L. Spraco de Camp, Michael Mok Gyxx and Lewis Carroll.
